Salmonella issues halt Clover Food production

Clover Food has temporarily stopped production due to a possible salmonella outbreak reported among its customers. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

Salmonella stats

- Most people infected with salmonella develop diarrhea, fever and abdominal cramps 12 to 72 hours after infection.
- The illness usually lasts four to seven days, and most people recover without treatment. However, in some cases, the diarrhea may be so severe that the patient needs to be hospitalized.
- Thorough cooking and processing will kill the germ, and sanitary practices can keep it from spreading.

Food safety. Clover Food Labs has temporarily closed pending an investigation into salmonella cases.

Food truck regulars likely noticed a mobile food staple was missing from yesterday's lunch hour.

Clover Food Labs, a Cambridge-based restaurant that operates food trucks throughout the Boston-area, announced it has temporarily halted business after learning that people who had been infected by salmonella ate its food in the days leading up to their illness.

"This is something we take very seriously," Clover founder and CEO Ayr Muir wrote on the company's website. "Clover has never been responsible for any food poisoning or food-borne illness that we know of. That's because we operate [cleanly] and take this sort of thing really, really seriously."

The company does not yet know the source of the salmonella, but epidemiologists are looking into it. The Massachusetts Department of Public Health Spokeswoman Anne Roach said there have been 12 confirmed cases.

"[We are] working with Cambridge and other communities to investigate and identify the source of a recent salmonella outbreak," Roach said.

Salmonella germs are common in uncooked animal food products, such as eggs and meat, as well as unpasteurized milk and dairy. According to the Centers for Disease Control, there are 42,000 cases are reported annually in the U.S., and it's more prevalent in the summer months.

As a precaution, Muir decided to close the four brick-and-mortar restaurants, as well as Clover's food trucks, until further notice.

"We don't want even the chance to creating illness, so we thought it best to close our operations until we know more," Muir wrote.

He said employees are scrubbing restaurants and trucks, as well as checking ingredients and testing workers for the bacteria.

Marathon bombings. Tsarnaev seeks more lawyers for defense team

The teen accused in the Boston Marathon bombings is requesting that more legal help be provided to him.

In a motion filed yesterday, a lawyer for Dzhokhar Tsarnaev requested that a third lawyer be appointed to the 19-year-old's defense team.

Judy Clarke, Tsarnaev's court-appointed attorney, filed the motion that requested David Bruck be appointed as a third lawyer. Clarke cited the scope of the work that will need to be done. MICHAEL NAUGHTON

Medical examiner recounts Bulger's alleged murders

Whitey trial. The state's former chief medical examiner testified yesterday in the trial of the alleged mob boss.

Alleged mob boss James "Whitey" Bulger is accused of various crimes, including 19 murders, and yesterday the state's former chief medical examiner explained how each of those people died, in some cases detailing each gunshot wound.

Dr. Richard Evans took the witness stand yesterday for Day 21 of Bulger's racketeering, extortion and murder trial. He was asked by government prosecutors to explain the cause and manner of death for each of the alleged victims.

Brain Halloran, who was gunned down as he left a Seaport District bar in 1982 after Bulger and his gang learned he was talking to the FBI, was shot 14 times and likely died due to blood loss, Evans said.

Michael Donahue, the man who happened to be giving Halloran a ride home that day, was shot four times.

Donahue's family has sat through the length of the trail, including many of Bulger's pretrial hearings. They said it was tough, but not unexpected.

Tommy Donahue, Michael Donahue's son, told reporters that he carried his father's death certificate to court with him every day. Holding it up for reporters, he said next to the "cause of death" line should read the names of the FBI agents who helped protect Bulger during his time as head of the Winter Hill Gang.

Gunned down

Dr. Richard Evans said that the body of murder victim Edward Connors was filled with so many animal shot and bullet fragments that the medical examiner handed over 12 bottles of projectiles removed from Connors' body.

- Edward Connors was gunned down allegedly by Whitey Bulger and Stephen Flemmi while in a Morrissey Boulevard phone booth in 1975.
- John Martorano has testified that Bulger and Flemmi were the triggermen in that murder.

Open container. A West Roxbury man allegedly took photos of the politician's home and had an open container of alcohol.

A West Roxbury man was in court yesterday after he was caught allegedly skulking around Secretary of State John Kerry's Beacon Hill home Sunday afternoon.

Vladimir Romanov, 29, was arraigned in Boston Municipal Court yesterday for allegedly possessing an open container outside the affluent home.

Police said he may have been intoxicated. He was believed to be taking photographs of the house from his car before the arrest. Inside his car, officers found a pellet gun, three cellphones, a navigation system and a canvas bag holding seven carbon dioxide cartridges.

Romanov was released on his own recognizance on a public drinking charge, but was held on a warrant for allegedly violating the terms of his probation on a drunk driving case. A judge also revoked his bail on an open assault with a dangerous weapon charge out of Quincy District Court.

Kerry wasn't home at the time of the man's arrest. He was visiting his wife, Teresa Heinz Kerry, at Spaulding Rehabilitation Hospital, where she is recovering from a seizure.

Attorney general: Trayvon Martin death unnecessary

Shooting case. Holder said federal prosecutors were continuing to investigate.

The shooting death of Florida teenager Trayvon Martin was tragic and unnecessary, and it ought to spark public debate about how to prevent similar incidents, Attorney General Eric Holder said yesterday.

"Independent of the legal determination that will be made, I believe that this tragedy provides yet another opportunity for our nation to speak honestly about the complicated and emotionally charged issues that this case has raised," Holder told a convention of Delta Sigma Theta, a black sorority, in Washington, D.C.

Although Zimmerman was cleared of murder charges under Florida law, U.S. prosecutors could decide to bring criminal charges under a federal hate-crimes law, and some civil rights advocates are lobbying prosecutors to do so.

The hate-crimes law would require the government to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Zimmerman shot Martin because of race.

Prosecutors would decide what to do based on the facts of the case and the law, Holder said.

The chief U.S. prosecutor and an appointee of President Barack Obama, Holder received a warm welcome from the more than 14,000 sorority members in the audience at the Walter E. Washington Convention Center.

The audience responded enthusiastically when Holder said the Justice Department shared their concerns about the Martin case, and again when he said he wanted to take action to counter the "underlying attitudes, mistaken beliefs and stereotypes that serve as the basis for these too common incidents." Thousands of demonstrators demanding "Justice for Trayvon" marched in major cities across the United States on Sunday to protest the acquittal of George Zimmerman in the shooting death of unarmed black teenager Trayvon Martin.

Sexual predator sweep arrests 255 suspects

Abuse. The agency also identified 61 victims of child sexual exploitation.

Authorities have arrested 255 alleged child predators in the United States and eight other countries in an operation led by a U.S. agency that illustrated a growing trend called "sextortion" in which children are blackmailed into providing pornographic images of themselves, officials said yesterday.

The monthlong Operation iGuardian, led by the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement agency, is part of a larger effort to identify and rescue victims of online sexual exploitation and arrest their abusers as well as others who own, trade and produce images of child pornography, officials said.

"In many instances, the abusers take advantage of a sexual image the child divulges in a chat room or over a text to force the child to continue to produce darker and more pornographic images on threat of broader disclosures of the images over the Internet," ICE Director John Morton told a news conference.

"The sexual abuse and exploitation of children over the Internet is a pervasive and growing problem," Morton said. REUTERS

Accident. Apple to probe death caused by charging iPhone

Apple Inc is investigating an accident in which a Chinese woman was killed by an electric shock when answering a call on her iPhone 5 while it was charging, the technology company said yesterday.

"We are deeply saddened to learn of this tragic incident and offer our condolences to the Ma family. We will fully investigate and cooperate with authorities in this matter," Apple said in an email. REUTERS

Known anti-vac crusader Jenny McCarthy to share her 'View'

I've written this column for a long, long, long time, covering celebrities who do stupid and irresponsible things. But there is no one more stupid and more irresponsible than known anti-vac personality Jenny McCarthy, who was just named the new cohost of "The View" on Monday morning.

"We are delighted that Jenny will be joining us as a permanent cohost on 'The View' starting in September," Barbara Walters said in a statement. "Jenny brings us intelligence as well as warmth and humor. She can be serious and outrageous." For her part, McCarthy said, "I'm beyond thrilled to be joining Barbara and the other amazing women at the table. I look forward to helping make hot topics a little bit hotter."

Are those hot topics whether or not you should vaccinate your children? McCarthy has claimed that vaccines cause autism to such mainstream news organizations as "Larry King Live" and "Frontline," and she has worked as a spokesperson for various fringe anti-vaccination groups. There is absolutely no scientific evidence that vaccines — which keep our children from succumbing to terrible diseases and protect our littlest ones from certain death — cause autism.

Her stance is extremely dangerous for the wellbeing of our children and society as a whole. It is my sincere hope that "The View" explicitly states in her contract that she is not allowed to spew her anti-science lies on broadcast television. Shame on Barbara Walters, a true journalist, for giving this fearmongering nitwit a microphone. My only hope is that maybe, just maybe, they're drastically changing the format of the show, and Walters and the other "View" girls will be contestants on a reloaded version of "Singled Out."

Talking point

Timberlake on 'Take Back the Night'

Justin Timberlake insists he had no idea the name of his new single, "Take Back the Night," was also the name of a sexual assault awareness group until the group took issue with his decision. The group, the Take Back the Night Foundation, took issue with Timberlake appropriating their name for a steamy R&B track. "Upon the release of my new single, I was made aware of an organization of the same name called the Take Back the Night Foundation," Timberlake says in a statement. "Neither my song nor its lyrics have any association with this organization. As I've learned more about the Take Back the Night Foundation, I'm moved by its efforts to stop violence against women, create safe communities and encourage respectful relationships for women — something we all should rally around."

Cory Monteith's cause of death being fast-tracked

The investigation into the cause of death for "Glee" star Cory Monteith is being fast-tracked, Vancouver police confirm to TMZ. "Due to the intense public interest, the toxicology will be expedited," a police source says, explaining that the results should be announced in two or three days. The autopsy began yesterday.

Monteith was found dead in his room at the Fairmont Pacific Rim Hotel in Vancouver Saturday after missing his check-out time. He was alone and there were reportedly no signs of foul play.

Well, thanks for this, Oprah

Lindsay Lohan is set to star in her own eight-part reality series for Oprah Winfrey's OWN network chronicling the troubled starlet's attempts to rebuild her career once she's finished with her latest stint in rehab. And apparently Lindsay's mom, Dina Lohan, thinks the deal comes with some hands-on care from Winfrey herself. "It's fantastic," Dina tells E! News. "If anyone is going to help mentor you, it's going to be Oprah."

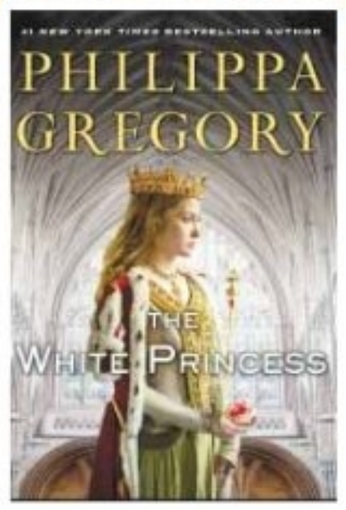
Yeah, right. Oprah isn't going to be holding anyone's hand, Dina. She is just going to collect a paycheck from the exploits of your daughter. But, of course, you aren't familiar with that notion, right?

SANTI U

PHILIPPA GREGORY

The author's latest royalty-inspired novel brings readers a tale about a woman forced to wed Henry Tudor.

CHANNELING A SUPPRESSED SCANDAL



Philippa Gregory is a master of crafting engaging tales of British royalty, often told from a woman's viewpoint. Her latest book, "The White Princess," on sale July 23, hinges on Elizabeth of York, who expects to marry Richard III until he is defeated by Henry Tudor — whom she is then forced to wed instead. This latest novel is part of Gregory's Cousins' War series, including "The White Queen," which debuts as a Starz film at 8 p.m. on Aug. 10.

What inspired you to write this book?

I came across her when I was writing about her son Henry VIII, and I thought, "What an interesting character." I came across this really well-concealed scandal that she had probably been the mistress of Richard III. … It was such a big scandal at the time, and it has been genuinely suppressed.

Most of your books feature women. What do you enjoy about writing female protagonists?

I've spent most of my life working on women and history partly because that's my interest and partly because here are women whose stories simply have not been told. We've got the stories that have been very well-recorded, very well-repeated of the men who are important at this time, but history has completely obscured the women.

What is your writing process?

I write really anywhere. I don't have to be at home. I can even write [while] traveling. When I'm writing something that's got a lot of the characters in it, a lot of historical events, I find it easier to write where I have my research books around me, so I can check them as I go.

How do you decide what to write about?

I often find there's nothing published, that when readers say, "Where can I find out more?" there is nowhere to send them. Then I feel almost obliged to write something.

What drew you to this particular part of history?

It's a very personal story, a very private story. She's married to a man she doesn't love at all, who is the enemy of her house. … It's about a time of extraordinary change. You almost see this change being worked through with this young woman.

The ups and downs of Chris Brown

Score card. Breezy was set to release his sixth album this week. But with his probation revoked yesterday, does his bad behavior overshadow his music? We tallied up his various hits and misses to find out.

'Run It' NOVEMBER 2005: At the age of 16, Chris Brown releases his eponymous debut album. That same month, Rihanna — a 17-year-old who also released her debut album that year — introduces Brown at the Vibe awards. (+3)

'The kid is not my son' SEPTEMBER 2007: At the 2007 MTV Video Music Awards, Brown goes on after Britney Spears, who bombs so badly she receives most of the press surrounding the ceremony. Brown shares the stage with Rihanna who, at this point, he denies he is dating. Included within his short set is a cover of Michael Jackson's "Billie Jean," which earns him high marks for his spot-on dance moves. (+5)

'Double Your Pleasure' JUNE 2008: When questioned about Rihanna, Brown admits to reporters, "Our relationship is growing. We started off as friends and we're getting a little bit closer now." Meanwhile, "Forever," the song that Brown initially intended as a gum commercial jingle, becomes an international hit. The next year he would become known internationally for another type of hit. (+10)

'Stuck on Stupid' FEBRUARY 2009: An argument at a pre-Grammy party turns into a fight in a car where Brown assaults Rihanna. A photo surfaces online of a severely swollen-faced Rihanna, sporting bruises and scrapes. Brown turns himself in and is sentenced to five years of probation, 1,400 hours of community service and a restraining order that requires him to stay 50 yards away from Rihanna at all times, except public events, where he is required to stay 10 yards away. (-25)

'Me and You and the Dance Floor' JULY 2009: Brown releases a video in which he calls his assault on Rihanna "inexcusable." Later that month, amateur video of a wedding party's entrance, choreographed to "Forever," goes viral, eventually racking up more than 10 million hits and putting the song back on the charts. The video links to a site where viewers can donate money to help combat domestic violence. (+10)

'Fallen Angel' NOVEMBER 2009: Calling it the Fan Appreciation Tour, Brown does a set of 19 dates in small venues to thank fans for sticking by him during a time where his popularity could have easily declined. A portion of the proceeds are donated to the Best Buddies International nonprofit organization. (+4)

'Throwed' MARCH 2011: A newly blond Brown appears on "Good Morning America" to promote his album, "F.A.M.E." and sit for an interview with Robin Roberts, who repeatedly asks him questions about the Rihanna incident. "I think today's the album day, so that's what I'm focused on. Everybody go get that album," he says, becoming increasingly agitated. After performing, he storms into his dressing room and smashes a window. Paparazzi photos show him shirtless and angry outside of the show's studio. (-5)

'I Can Transform Ya' FEBRUARY 2012: "F.A.M.E." wins the Grammy for Best R&B Album. Also during awards season, he wins five BET Awards, including Best Male R&B Artist and the Viewers Choice Award. (+6)

'Damage' JUNE 2012: Meek Mill, Drake and Chris Brown are at the same NYC nightclub. A fight breaks out, allegedly between Brown and Drake, who at the time is reported to be dating Rihanna. Bottles of alcohol are thrown and Brown ends up with a cut on his chin, which he posts a shot of via Twitter. (-2)

'Get At Ya' OCTOBER 2012: Brown and his friends dress up as Taliban-esque terrorists for a Halloween party hosted by Rihanna, who he is reportedly dating again. (The restraining order must have been lifted!) On an interview with Los Angeles radio station Power 106, Brown reasons, "We dress our kids up as Satan, demons, little goblins. ... Get over it, people. I was dressed as ... the people we kill." (-2)

'Super Human' NOVEMBER 2012: Brown starts his own charity foundation called the Symphonic Love Foundation. The foundation boasts a mission that "supports and creates arts programs for youth while encouraging everyday public service, respect and kindness. Symphonic Love believes in the capacity of love and art to change the world." (+5)

Type 1 Diabetes?
Up to 70% of people with diabetes develop nerve damage.

Diabetes nerve damage can affect the legs, feet, or hands, causing numbness or loss of sensation. But since this nerve damage comes on gradually, many do not even realize they have a problem - until it leads to more serious complications.

Doctors at the Translational Pain Research Group at Brigham and Women's Hospital are conducting a research study of an investigational medication that may help reduce nerve damage for people with type 1 diabetes. If you choose to participate, you will receive a no cost, non-invasive test to help determine if you have early signs of diabetes nerve damage. You will also be compensated for time and travel.

In memory of Tony

A legacy in journalism.
Metro newspapers mourn editor-in-chief.

I often teased Tony Metcalf, by far the longest-serving editor-in-chief in Metro US's nearly 15-year history, that I'd been cast in an episode of "Newspaper Nightmares." He had the Gordon Ramsay act down pat. In that thick British accent, he was never afraid to tell you that you stink, sometimes before bothering to learn your name, often using insults you'd never heard before.

Tony arrived in 2008 on a mission from Metro headquarters to get us in shape. He wasn't here to make friends. In fact, he seemed to go out of his way not to make friends. Tony was all business, with a newspaperman's serious sense about the news. And without Tony's ability to negotiate a contract or trim a budget, my gut tells me it's unlikely you would be holding today's edition.

But while Tony wanted you to think he was the gruff, stoic Brit, that's the one spot where he eventually failed. Tony turned a three-month assignment into a six-year stint as editor-in-chief and quickly became a beloved figure in the Metro universe.

The amazing thing about Tony was that whatever started as a conversation about work would wind its way into a discussion of life. No one offered as much wisdom as he did when I got married, as my son was about to be born and especially when I lost three close family members in a very short stretch. Tony just always knew what to say. His door was always open — but once it closed, it was like we were in our own universe. And he also had a knack of knowing just when to reach into the drawer for two glasses and a bottle.

The weekends were painfully lonely for Tony. He loved living in New York and could never get his fill of baseball (he said it was a civilized sport). But having his family in the U.K. was tough. He always had a special look in his eye when talking about them and looked forward to the day when they would join him here.

"The amazing thing about Tony was that whatever started as a conversation about work would wind its way into a discussion of life."

We spent years together, and I only wish we'd had decades more. When Tony fell ill, I knew it was the time that I needed to "have his back" the most. I had just left Metro. He put me at ease, like he always did, reminding me that he'd been the one who pushed me to take the new job, to do what was best for my family. As I told him in one of our last conversations, "Tony, you probably can't grasp it, but when we worked together, you were part father figure, part boss and all friend. I'm not saying any sort of sad goodbye, I just want to make sure you know how much I've valued being by your side."

Reading the outpouring of condolences, I can tell I'm just one of many who felt that way. It's a great credit to the man, Tony Metcalf — rest in peace, my friend.

A note from our CEO

This Sunday, we lost our best friend and editor-in-chief, Tony Metcalf.

For the last four years, we have not only built a very strong newspaper together but also a special friendship. Our friendship grew stronger and stronger from the first day we met.

Tony always said that people didn't get me — but he did. And through our many hours together we learned a lot about each other. His

Wise words

Crack on

Tony Metcalf was a journalist in the truest sense. He always reported the story and kept his opinion out of it, which couldn't have been an easy thing to do given his strong personality. He spoke with a thick Northern British accent that took time to adjust to, and his staff emails were filled with Britishisms, in which we would take great delight. But he also had the common sense to never let any of this language leak into his writing, reporting or editing. Here are a few of our favorite Tony Metcalf expressions:

- When discussing party plans he would write, "We'll be arranging a bit of a knees-up."
- When he was happy with how something looked in the paper, he might call it "a belter" or "a bobby dazzler."
- When he was surprised by the details of a story, he might exclaim, "Christ on a motorcycle!"
- And at the end of an encouraging email, which didn't always come easily, he'd urge everybody to "crack on." METRO/PH

Obituary

Tony Metcalf, editor-in-chief of Metro US

Tony Metcalf passed away Sunday at age 50 after a brief but heroic battle with colon cancer.

Metcalf was born in 1963 in Newton Aycliffe, Northern England, and spent his formative years in Cramlington. He was the head of journalism at Darlington Technical College, where he had initially qualified as a journalist many years previously. Metcalf's journalism career started in earnest as assistant editor at the Northern Echo, a daily regional morning newspaper serving the northeast of England. In 2000, he made the leap to editor-in-chief for Metro International, a position which saw Metcalf traveling the world, launching new Metro newspapers in more than 20 cities.

In 2003, he left Metro to launch 7Days, a free daily tabloid published in Dubai in the United Arab Emirates, where he worked for three years before selling the paper to the Associated Newspapers. He returned to Metro in 2008, this time to its U.S. division, to oversee publications in New York, Philadelphia and Boston, as well as the online department.

Metcalf was a lifelong Newcastle United fan, a proud British citizen and a devoted family man to his wife, Lesley, and their two beloved children, Alex, 18, and Freya, 10.

Donations can be given to St. Teresa's Hospice in Darlington (www.darlingtonhospice.org.uk), where he spent his final days.

Staff memories

"In 1999, Metro International launched a newspaper in Newcastle upon Tyne. Unfortunately, the publication had to close down not long after the launch. This catastrophic venture had only one positive result: We recruited this tall, handsome, hardworking and tough guy to London to become Metro International's first global editor-in-chief. His name was Tony Metcalf. To work with Tony has forever changed my view on what is possible. He set a new standard on what to expect from a newspaper professional in terms of work ethic, taste, good attitude and friendliness. For this experience I will always be grateful." PELLE TORNBERG, CHAIRMAN, METRO US

"When Tony became aware that his illness was terminal, he connected with all of us and told us about his condition. Objectively and with sadness, of course, but never with pathos or making himself a victim. I think all of his thoughts were with his family and then with dear friends and colleagues. It is only a little more than one month ago that Tony and I exchanged some emails. I told him about how incredibly important he had been to me back in 2001 when Tony — then in the capacity of global editor-in-chief — was traveling the world launching new Metro newspapers. I remember him for his incredible dedication to the Metro project, and for his personal passion for the people he worked with. He showed me everything he knew (which was a lot), and we got on extremely well, personally and professionally. Tony's editorial standards were very high, and his wealth of knowledge was enormous. Tony, thank you for being such a great friend and a fantastic mentor for me. I wish you could have stayed much longer." PER MIKAEL JENSEN, CEO, METRO INTERNATIONAL

"All signs pointed in the same direction: It was going to be a horrible flight. Four Metro editors crammed on a seven-hour journey from Europe to the U.S. To make matters worse, British Airways had employed a man solely for the purpose of blowing balloon animals. The racket was intolerable. Tony Metcalf took the lead, ordering drinks for us all. After an hour of drinking and muttering, he had suddenly had enough. His solution? Tony stole a balloon sword from a girl of 7 or 8 — and hit her over the head with it. For what seemed like an eternity, we all waited for her reaction. But Tony had chosen well. The little girl took the sword back and then attacked. A balloon war broke out over the Atlantic Ocean. It was the best flight of my life — all thanks to a man unlike any other." ERIC LJUNGGREN, INTERNATIONAL EDITORIAL COORDINATOR, METRO INTERNATIONAL, 1999-2005

"Tony thrived in the toils of 12-hour workdays and yells of deadlines where others whither. Sure, he was passionate and blustery — and at times cutthroat. All successful blue-collar blokes are, whether in England or America. But his best lessons for me come from his English subtlety. When there was harsh reality to convey, he'd give it straight and simple, then end with: 'But there it is.' For all his exaltations in the newsroom or boardroom, it was when he got quiet and gentle over a whiskey in his office that he shared the best insight. Alas, the British empire has lost an epic missionary for English subtlety and substance, and Tony's departure leaves a vast hole in the world of teeth-and-nails journalism. But there it is."

"Tony once told me that he didn't have time to care about employees' personal lives. But that wasn't true. At every opportunity, he would ask about my wife and son and life in general. He may have had a brusque exterior, but at his root everything he did, every time he pushed us harder, was to make Metro better. It was to make us better. He succeeded on both accounts." JOSH CORNFIELD, NATIONAL NEWS EDITOR, METRO US, 2007–2010

"About a year into working at Metro, I got on the wrong side of some local protest groups and started getting hate mail. People were starting blogs about me, posting complaints on our website and emailing Tony daily urging him to fire me. One day, it got so bad that I called Tony in an attempt to tell him my side of the story. Before I could get a few words out, he cut me off. 'The more hate mail I get about you,' he said, 'the better I know you're doing your job.' Tony placed deep trust in his reporters and was a fearless advocate for their work." ALEXANDRA WIGGLESWORTH, REPORTER, METRO PHILADELPHIA

"It was a pleasure working with the legend, a man who made news interesting and swearing across the newsroom a pleasurable pastime." SEAN MCEWAN, PHOTOGRAPHER, 7DAYS, 2006-2008

"Tony Metcalf approached the world with the keen curiosity of a born journalist. A brief visit to his office to discuss work-related issues could blossom into a full-blown, 45-minute tutorial on anything from the vagaries of this year's England Domestic cricket season to the politics of the Middle East. Endowed with a nimble mind, a quick wit and an easy charm, he was a true pleasure to work with. He was a doting father, a loving husband and a good friend; he will be sorely missed." BOB EDMUNDS, DIRECTOR OF DIGITAL AND NATIONAL ACCOUNTS, METRO US

"On Fridays, when there were just a few of us in the office, I'd sometimes receive the coveted invitation to join Tony for an afternoon glass of whiskey. He'd ask each of us personal questions about our families and lives. It was in those times that Tony demonstrated not just his ability to be a great leader, but his talent for connecting with people." CASSANDRA GARRISON, HEAD OF ONLINE CONTENT, METRO US

"The world lost a beacon of light, the news world lost a great journalist, a family lost a loving father and husband, and I lost a wonderful friend." CLARK WEAVER, NIGHT PRODUCTION MANAGER, METRO US

Theater. "How We Got On" is a play set in the "Yo! MTV Raps" era.

When one thinks about the birth of hip-hop, a Midwestern suburb isn't exactly the first place that springs to mind.

"We think of a Bronx or Brooklyn or Compton sort of story," says Summer Williams, director of Company One's new production, "How We Got On." "But this play looks at how hip-hop has become part of American culture and how that's happened."

The story revolves around three teenagers — Hank, Julian and Luann — who are working through their suburban teen angst by immersing themselves in hip-hop and rap music. The play takes place in 1988, the year MTV's now-defunct "Yo! MTV Raps" premiered, pushing the genre to the forefront of our pop culture consciousness and quickly turning hip-hop culture into a national phenomenon.

"The play uses hip-hop and rap, and rhythm and rhyme, to tell this story," says Williams. "There's a DJ on stage who is literally mixing and remixing the play as it's happening."

Veteran hip-hop heads who have been fans since the late '80s will recognize many of the well-known songs of the era, but the play also features a number of original raps penned by spoken word artist Idris Goodwin, the show's playwright.

"At its heart, it's a coming-of-age story," says Goodwin. "It looks at three very different 15-year-olds and how their lives intersect through the vehicle of hip-hop and rap."

Goodwin believes that anyone can relate to this play, regardless of musical tastes.

"It reminds you of the time when you'd stay out super late with your friends on the playground, and you'd share some of your secret self with them," she says.

It's a dog's life at these hotels

Woof. It's just not a vacation without Fido by your side. At these pet-friendly East Coast hotels, it's unclear whether you or your pup is the bigger VIP.

Politico pooches

Washington, D.C., has several Kimpton hotels — and Kimpton has to be the most pet-friendly national hotel chain ever. Of the less expensive D.C. properties, Hotel Rouge's location near Dupont Circle is an easy and pleasant walk from the White House and The Mall. Or head to 15th and P to find boutiques, bars and restaurants. Kimpton's nightly wine hour means you can enjoy a tipple or two while your dog is safely snoozing at your feet. The hotel has no size restriction and no pet fee in any of its properties, and water and pet snacks in the lobby is the norm. (From $169, www.rougehotel.com.)

High-rolling hounds

The Showboat went pet-friendly in 2011, the first Atlantic City casino resort to do so. The property allows dogs 50 pounds and less, and caps out at two dogs per room. Upon request, the hotel can provide treats, food, bowls and a bed. Just keep them away from the craps tables — dogs are not allowed on the casino floor or any public area. Though the bollards on the property look like hydrants, restrain your pooch until you get to the designated doggie bathroom location nearby (ask the doorman to point it out to you). Don't leave without hitting the dog-friendly park in the town, just a short walk away. (Humans: from $131; dogs: $60 per dog, per day, www.showboatac.com.)

Ivy League friends

The Hanover Inn in Hanover, N.H., sits adjacent to Dartmouth Green, a large old common surrounded by Dartmouth College buildings. This is where the town's academia hang out with their pooches, and many welcome a stop-and-chat. The green is also a great spot for a picnic with your pal. Hanover is a very small town, but it's great for people-watching: Sit together on the Hanover Inn's shaded porch, lined with quaint rocking chairs, and watch the world go by. The Inn provides what just might be the most comfy dog beds ever, and bowls are available, too. (Humans: from $199; dogs: $50 one-time fee, www.hanoverinn.com)

Posh pups

Tucked off bustling Thames Street in downtown Newport, R.I. — but still only minutes away from its restaurants, bars and stores — dog-friendly Vanderbilt Grace is a historic mansion hotel, which allows leashed pups in its public areas (except restaurants). Enjoy the hotel's complimentary daily champagne breakfast together in the walled garden or cocktails and dog biscuits on the roof deck. The garden is lovely — but make sure Fido doesn't have an accident in it. For bathroom breaks, walk across the rear parking lot to Church Street. Vanderbilt Grace offers Sojos dog treats and Cain and Able dog bath collection for purchase on the Bespoke by Grace online check-in menu and a dog package that includes bedding, bowl and arrival treats. (Humans: from $255; dogs: $50-$100 onetime fee depending on weight; dog/human packages from $395; www.vanderbiltgrace.com)

This newly built hotel is located across the street from Oriole Park at Camden Yards, and M&T Bank Stadium, home of the Ravens, is also nearby. Some rooms even look right on to the Orioles field. Camden Yards is part of the massive development of the Baltimore Inner Harbor district — the harbor and other downtown attractions are all within walking distance. Dogs aren't permitted on the boardwalk or beach, but they're allowed to walk the Inner Harbor. Radiant skin from the inside out

The Joanna Vargas Salon is located at 501 Fifth Ave. in New York. Call 212-949-2350 for an appointment. / JOANNA VARGAS

Beauty. Celebrity facialist Joanna Vargas shows us how to glow.

When Michelle Williams, Naomi Watts and Rachel Weisz need to get red carpet-ready, they head to renowned aesthetician Joanna Vargas' cozy Manhattan spa for her signature treatments, including the Triple Crown Facial, which exfoliates, purifies, de-puffs and tones the visage.

"It's a combination of some of the best technologies in skin care," says Vargas. "The thing that people love about this treatment is you can really see a result right away. You don't have to rely on faith."

The expert recently received a patent for another high-tech breakthrough: The Time Machine, a full-body LED light bed, which helps clients look younger without any invasive Botox or surgery. We stopped by to learn more about this exclusive anti-aging treatment and get plenty of advice on how to keep our skin looking flawless all summer long — and beyond.

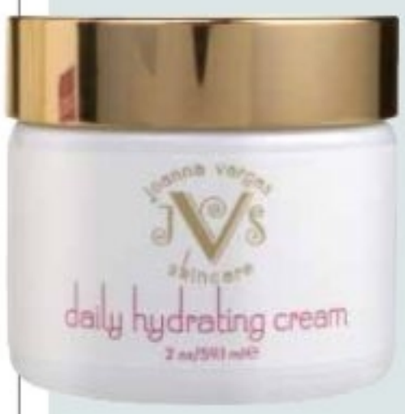
Her summer must-haves



1 Joanna Vargas Daily Hydrating Cream

$75, www.joannavargas.com
"It has zinc in it, so it has around SPF 20."

2 Eminence Organic Mineral Sunscreen Powder SPF 30

$58, www.eminenceorganics.com
"It's translucent and I wear it over my makeup or even when I have a naked face. You can carry it in your purse and it absorbs the oil on your face."

3 Reviva Vitamin E stick with SPF 20

$4, Whole Foods
"It's very simple and hydrating."

4 Marc Jacobs 384/S sunglasses

$340, www.solsticesunglasses.com
"Sunglasses are essential."

Vargas' beauty advice

Drink green juices

"A green juice a day keeps the skin clean and glowing. It's a great replacement for your afternoon coffee and it will literally transform your skin in a matter of days. Green juice helps oxygenate the skin and stimulates lymphatic drainage — so it's de-puffing, too. I love juice with romaine, celery, cucumber, spinach, parsley, kale and apple with a dash of lemon and ginger."

See a nutritionist

"I recommend clients see a nutritionist when they have a skin condition they are trying to fix. The skin is a window into what is happening on the inside of us — more specifically, our digestive system. Seeing a doctor like Frank Lipman just makes sense."

Consider doing more than just sunscreen

"Wash your face at night before bed! Your body repairs itself at night, and that won't happen without you removing all the dirt and grime of the day."

Follow these tips

Your summer skin-care routine:

- Exfoliate twice a week.
- Wash your face every night.
- Absolutely apply sunscreen every day. "For everyday use, SPF 30 is sufficient," says Vargas. "On the weekends, if you're going to be out by the pool or out in the park, then you have to wear something like a 58 and it has to have zinc and titanium. You can't get Coppertone."

Horoscope

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Because you can't resist responding to others in a warm and friendly manner, companions will treat you in a way that will lift up your spirits.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Let events develop at their own pace because, to your delight, you'll discover that your colleagues will be looking out for your interests even more than you are.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. You might not find a better day to have a meeting with someone about an important endeavor. Your colleague will be very receptive to your ideas.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Concepts that you've been toying with can pay off big time if given half a chance, especially if they're directly related to your work or career. Bring them out into the open.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. There is definitely a strong market for the skills and knowledge that you've spent a long time acquiring. Let others in top positions know what you know and have to offer.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. If you have a strong hunch concerning a way to save money, by all means explore this matter further. Opportunities for saving are all around you.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan 20. It looks like a recent acquaintance whom you feel a strong affinity toward is starting to play a significant role in your life. You'll see signs of this on the horizon.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb 18. If you set your mind to it, you should have no problem accomplishing anything you want. Between your cleverness and Lady Luck's help, all obstacles will melt away.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. If you find that you need a social diversion to cleanse your palate, do something fun, but keep it short. You don't want to cut into time that you need to get something important done.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Due to some maneuvering on your part, a positive change to your financial affairs could take place, although you might not realize it right away.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. You're likely to be exceptionally lucky with contracts or deals of any kind. If you've been trying to wrap up a project, now's the time to do it.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. The possibilities for increasing your resources look to be rather good. Even if you merely get a small stipend from one source, another could yield a significant amount. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Zimmerman's acquittal is a miscarriage of justice

Re: "Justice was served" (Metro, July 15) Although letter writer Frederick Bedell may feel that "Justice was served under the rules of our justice system," the fact remains that Mr. Trayvon Martin would still be alive today if George Zimmerman had just listened to the police dispatcher who told him to stop following Mr. Martin. Therefore, Zimmerman's acquittal is as big a miscarriage of justice as the acquittals of O.J. Simpson and the murderers of Emmett Till.

Fact: Trayvon Martin punched George Zimmerman in the face.

Fact: Martin slammed Zimmerman's head on the concrete several times.

Fact: Zimmerman feared for his life. He had the RIGHT to use deadly force to stop this attack.

Find an Education that Fits at
The College of Advancing and Professional Studies at UMass Boston

There are so many reasons why adults go back to school – What are yours?

INSPIRATION? From liberal arts to public policy, at UMass Boston's College of Advancing and Professional Studies (CAPS) you can sign up for courses to get fresh insights and ideas. Whether for academic credit or professional enrichment, CAPS courses help you fill in the gap between your knowledge and skills.

CAREER GROWTH? A certificate program is a valuable yet manageable amount of coursework for the busy adult. You can also enroll in one or two classes before making the commitment to matriculate.

If you want to change the world, a new online graduate certificate program in International Development could be a great place to start and will prepare you for a career in governance, development, donor relations and program management. With placement assistance for the required internship, you may find yourself working with an NGO, non-profit or other organization worldwide.

ADVANCEMENT? Advanced degrees are often the credentials to open and build careers. CAPS offers 16 master's degrees, most offered entirely online or blended. Explore the MEd in Instructional Design and discover innovative ways to integrate technology into how students learn. Or delve into a MA in Critical and Creative Thinking to build capacity and flexibility into your thinking and expression. Graduates bring newly acquired, exceptional problem-solving skills and creative management of complex projects to their current or future workplace.

The Cambridge School of Culinary Arts Cooks Up Food for the Soul

On any given day at The Cambridge School of Culinary Arts, you might find military veterans crafting mushroom-stuffed ravioli or baking towering cheese soufflés. A former finance manager could be searing sea bass one kitchen away from an aspiring chocolatier perfecting her cappuccino-cream truffles. They come from different backgrounds, but all students at The CSCA gather with a common purpose: to feed their minds, to feed their bodies, and above all – to feed their souls.

Established in 1974 by Chef Roberta Dowling, The Cambridge School of Culinary Arts has welcomed thousands of students eager to pursue their passion for food. The curriculum at The CSCA focuses as much on an education of the senses as mastery of classical and contemporary techniques. Students are taught the importance of touch, sight, smell, and sound in every aspect of food and its preparation. This hands-on approach encourages students to discover both beauty and complexity within the wide-ranging world of food. At the core of every class at The CSCA is a commitment to the student experience, respect for culinary diversity, and, most importantly, the notion that food is a celebration of life.

Four unique courses of study allow students to choose a program that suits both their current lifestyle and future goals: the 37-week Professional Chef's and Professional Pastry programs, and the 16-week Culinary Certificate and Certificate Pastry programs. Each program is designed to accelerate the learning process through hands-on, practical experience, so students receive a top-notch culinary education in a manageable amount of time. A flexible day and evening schedule allows students to work full- or part-time while attending, and class size is limited to allow for individual attention from a talented staff of chef instructors. Upon graduation, The CSCA offers lifelong career placement services.

Graduates of The CSCA have gone on to become executive chefs, restaurateurs, food writers, caterers, private chefs, and food stylists. Alumni have appeared on the Food Network's Cupcake Wars and Throwdown with Bobby Flay, opened nationally acclaimed restaurants, and been named Food & Wine's Best New Chef, among other things.

In addition to culinary training programs, The CSCA offers an extensive recreational program designed to give amateur chefs hands-on experience in the world of specialty cooking. These one-time classes explore all corners of the diverse culinary landscape, from sushi rolling and Moroccan cuisine to grilling and barbeque.

The CSCA is currently accepting applications for all September 2013 programs, with classes beginning on September 4, 2013.

Tight-lipped owners now letting team speak for itself

MLB. John Henry, Tom Werner and Larry Lucchino are hard men to find these days despite the team's success so far in 2013.

The perception of many surrounding the Red Sox ownership group since the team's onfield collapse in September of 2011, through the one year Bobby Valentine "era," right up to the start of the 2013 season was that whenever things got bad, John Henry, Tom Werner and Larry Lucchino were there to make things worse — all by attempting to spin things back in their direction with their mouths.

That approach backfired with fans as the team's record sellout streak at Fenway Park officially ended on April 10 of this year after 820 consecutive games at "100 percent capacity" or above.

One year ago this month, Lucchino sent out a letter to Sox season ticket holders that was openly mocked by the media and fans alike on sports radio and on the internet. Lucchino's intention was likely to give Red Sox fans hope and to give them a reason to come to Fenway in the second half of the 2012 season despite the fact that the team was sitting at .500 (43-43 at last year's All-Star break). There were more than a few dreaded "red seats" popping up at Fenway on NESN home broadcasts despite the "streak" and Lucchino spoke more about the allure of the ballpark itself in the letter than the onfield product.

"As you come to Fenway Park throughout this season, we hope you will come early — the secret to fully enjoying a sports venue," Lucchino wrote. "Now 'A Living Museum,' Fenway Park probably leads the league in bronze plaques and commemorative displays along the concourses. Enjoy them at your leisure early, well before the escalation of excitement as game time approaches."

Aside from Werner lashing out at Boston Globe columnist Dan Shaughnessy on Redsox.com in May over a column that insinuated that Ortiz may be using steroids and Henry sadly having to issue a statement of condolence in early June regarding the apparent suicide of a crew member on his yacht, the Red Sox ownership group has steered clear of the public eye throughout the 2013 season.

The most outrageous act by a member of the ownership trio may have occurred just this past weekend when Lucchino donned a black cowboy hat and wore hoop earrings at a Jason Aldean concert at Fenway. That act is a far cry from the day when Henry had to storm the broadcast studio of 98.5 The Sports Hub to defend his club's honor in the wake of the dismissal of Terry Francona or even when Lucchino himself would engage in a passive aggressive feud with former GM Theo Epstein through the media.

With the best record in baseball at this year's All-Star break, the Red Sox owners are letting the team do their talking for them. Judging by recent attendance, fans seem to be onboard with the change in approach.

MATT BURKE
matthew.burke@metro.us

Attendance coming back

Attendance hasn't dipped below 90 percent capacity at Fenway Park since a rainy Tuesday night game on June 18 against the Rays (86.7 percent capacity), which was also the second game of a double-header.

- Attendance hasn't dropped below 80 percent since an afternoon weekday game against Oakland on April 24 (79 percent full).
- The cheapest ticket on StubHub for this Friday's game against the Yankees was $53.65 as of last night.
